Statistics Canada released their first estimate of potato acreage in Canada as a result of data obtained from their survey of potato growers in Canada. The estimate is incomplete as the province of Quebec was unable to provide data due to COVID delays. The estimate will be updated when the official information is received. In the meantime, information from the Quebec Potato Producers Association and Statistics Quebec will be utilized. (* may be adjusted)

When the information from Quebec is added into the Statistics Canada survey, it is estimated that the 2020 potato acreage is very close to last year; Up 0.36% or 1,275 acres above 2019.

Given the cuts in processing volume, that were handed out at, or before, planting time, industry had expected a decrease in planted acres. Total acreage is estimated at 363,370 acres. Canada's acreage peaked at 457,500 acres in 2003.

The survey indicates decreases of 3,900 acres in New Brunswick, 2,145 acres in Alberta, 1,000 acres in Prince Edward Island, 300 acres in Saskatchewan, 100 acres in British Columbia, and 50 acres in Nova Scotia.

Provinces with acreage increases include, Quebec with 4,297 acres, Ontario with 2,473 acres, and Manitoba with 2,000 acres.

In a year with difficult circumstances to gather data as a result of COVID-19, the diligence of both Statistics Canada to conduct the survey, and growers who took the time to respond to it, is very much appreciated.
